Once at least the chance remark of a newspaper man at his New York home caused Mr. Morgan to take him for a two hour trip through his gallery here, ending with the parting injunction that he had been entertained as an enthusiast and not as a reporter. Queen Alexandra, the late King Edward and princes from all of Europe eagerly sought the same privilege in his London home.

Mr. Morgan's collections of rare books and sumptuous bindings were no less complete than his art collections. His library has original manuscripts of Poe, Hawthorne, Thoreau, and all the great American novelists, historians and poets, and the William Morris collection of early English and medieval printing. For an illuminated Bible and a Bunyan manuscript Mr. Morgan paid over $25,000. He had many first edition Shakespeare folion and one of the rare Gutenberg Bibles.
